WILLIAM R. SIMPSON

Professor William R. Simpson is retiring with 22 years of service to Potomac State College.

Born in Lake Worth, Florida, Bill began his academic training in Palm Beach Junior College, transferring soon to the University of Miami where he achieved a Bachelor of Science and a Master of Science in chemistry. Attracted to West Virginia by a research grant, Bill came to Morgantown where he acquired a doctorate and a taste for teaching.

For nine years Bill taught at Shepherd College becoming chairman of the chemistry department. With the discovery that there were other lives to lead, Bill resigned from Shepherd and re-entered graduate school at WVU for a Master of Arts degree in English. After more graduate study at the University of Maryland, Bill returned to teaching, first at California State and finally at Potomac State.

During his years at Potomac State, Bill was an instructor in English, substitute in chemistry and chemical engineering, a participant in all areas of drama, an advocate for the Faculty Assembly, and coordinator of English.

Bill's retirement plans are inchoate, but much traveling and collecting are anticipated; he also plans to read all the novels of Charles Dickens again.
